Meredith has a broad practice across Chambers' core areas including personal injury, clinical negligence, inquests, property damage, professional negligence and general commercial litigation.

She has a busy court practice, appearing in a variety of hearings and applications every week. Throughout the Coronavirus pandemic, she has conducted numerous remote hearings and applications.

She is also instructed in The Ingenious Litigation, led by Ben Quiney QC and Carlo Taczalski, a multi-million pound claim concerning allegedly negligent tax planning advice.

Meredith read law at the University of York, graduating first in her year and being the first person to be awarded First Class Honours (with distinction) in Law. While undertaking her LLM she was a tutor at the University of York in both tort and contract.

Prior to joining the Bar, she spent a year as the judicial assistant to Lord Justice Simon in the Court of Appeal where she predominantly worked on large commercial cases, but also gained experience across a broad range of practice areas. Meredith also worked at the Infected Blood Inquiry where her expertise was required in taking witness evidence from infected and affected individuals and in compiling reports evaluating information from thousands of pages of disclosed documents.

Health & Safety

Meredith has experience of a range of health and safety cases as a result of being supervised by Mike Atkins for 3 months of her pupillage. She assisted in drafting a range of documents including a basis of plea and mitigation note as well as numerous opinions.

Inquests & Public Inquiries

Meredith has experience in a range of inquests following supervision by Mike Atkins for 3 months of her pupillage.

Before joining chambers Meredith was part of the legal team at the Infected Blood Inquiry – the largest public inquiry in UK history. She worked on the appeal of a Coroner’s decision while a judicial assistant in the Court of Appeal.

Personal Injury

Meredith’s practice focuses on road traffic, employer’s liability and public liability claims.

She has extensive experience of remote hearings via both video and audio-only court hearings and the necessary skills required to adapt her approach to advocacy in these circumstances.

As well as conducting her own cases, Meredith gained experience of personal injury cases as a result of being supervised by Alexander Macpherson for 6 months of her pupillage. She also assisted a number of other members of chambers during the course of her pupillage, including drafting numerous schedules and counter-schedules.

Product Liability

Meredith gained experience of product liability cases as a result of being supervised by Richard Sage for 3 months of her pupillage.

She also assisted James Medd on a case involving property damage caused by allegedly defective computer equipment.

Commercial

Meredith accepts instructions on a broad range of contract disputes. Before joining chambers Meredith gained experience of a range of Commercial Law disputes whilst working as the Judicial Assistant to Lord Justice Simon in the Court of Appeal.

Construction

Meredith has experience of assisting on a number of construction disputes during pupillage, including:

- A case involving water damage to a residential property during construction as a result of inadequate weather proofing;
- A case involving the extent to which the design specifications of a construction project ought to be implied from the known use to which the site would be put; and
- A mediation involving delays in the renovation of a multi-million pound home.

Insurance & Reinsurance

Meredith gained experience across a range of insurance and re-insurance matters, including a case involving the question of when the Insured's behaviour was so reckless as to provide a sufficient ground to avoid cover, during her pupillage.

Before starting her pupillage Meredith gained experience of insurance and re-insurance disputes whilst working as a Judicial Assistant to Lord Justice Simon in the Court of Appeal, notably Spire Healthcare Ltd v Royal & Sun Alliance Insurance Plc [2018] EWCA Civ 317.
